

Life is interesting these days. Families look different. Breadwinners have to juggle responsibilities at home like looking after kids or aging parents. More and more people need to find work situations that accommodate their life and family responsibilities better. Flexible and remote type working arrangements can create an advantage for employers too and work for the bottom line of the company. Often the most productive workers are not the ones in the office. At the end of day what really counts is an effective team doing meaningful work that makes a difference and achieves results.

Our task is to strike a balance, to find a middle way, to learn not to overextend ourselves with extraneous activities and preoccupations, but to simplify our lives more and more. The key to finding a happy balance in life is simplicity.
